A tree is a tall plant with a trunk and branches made of wood. Trees can live for many years. The oldest tree ever discovered is approximately 5,000 years old. The four main parts of a tree are the roots, the trunk, the branches, and the leaves. The roots of a tree are usually under the ground. A single tree has many roots. The roots carry nutrients and water from the ground through the trunk and branches to the leaves of the tree. They can also breathe in air. The trunk is the main body of the tree. The trunk is covered with bark which protects it from damage. Branches grow from the trunk. They spread out so that the leaves can get more sunlight. The leaves of a tree are green most of the time, but they can come in many colours, shapes and sizes. The leaves take in sunlight and use water and food from the roots to make the tree grow, and to reproduce.

Before people stood on the Moon, the United States and the USSR sent robots to the Moon. The robots were the first man-made objects to touch the Moon. Humans landed on the Moon on the 21st of July, 1969. Astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin landed their lunar ship, the Eagle, on the surface of the moon. Then, as half the world watched him on television, Armstrong climbed down the ladder of the Eagle and was the first human to touch the Moon. He said, "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind." Even though the footprints were left on the moon a long time ago, it is likely that they are still there, as there is no wind or rain, making erosion extremely slow. The footprints do not get filled in or smoothed out. More people landed on the Moon between 1969 and 1972, when the last spaceship, Apollo 17 visited. Snow is a form of ice. Snow forms when water in the atmosphere becomes frozen. Snow comes in all different shapes and sizes. At the freezing point of water snow melts and becomes liquid water. Sometimes, the snow will melt very fast and become water vapour. Snow is used for some winter sport activities like skiing and sledding. Sometimes people make artificial snow so they can ski. People also commonly build things out of snow for fun. Children like to make snow angels. Snow can also be dangerous, as it can lower visibility and make driving very difficult. The roller coaster is a kind of theme park ride. A roller coaster is usually a small train. It has a number of carriages that travel on a track. This track has hills that go up and valleys that go down. Sometimes it has other features that will turn the train upside-down. The track can be made from wood or steel. Some roller coasters are made for children, so they do not travel very fast. Other roller coasters are made very tall and they travel very fast. Riders are generally held in place with a bar, a belt, or something similar. Scientifically, a roller coaster works because of gravity, a force that pulls things down to the ground. Most roller coaster trains are pulled to the top of a hill on a chain. The train will slide down the track, which has a number of hills and valleys. As it slides downhill it goes faster, and it slows down when climbing. The first roller coaster appeared in the United States in 1865, and workers pulled the carriage to the top of the track.

A smile is a face made by flexing the muscles near both ends of the mouth. The smile can also be made through the eyes when the cheek raises and forms a wrinkle around the eyes. Smiles usually express happiness. A smile can be natural or fake. However, smiling can be different with animals. When smiling, the teeth show, but sometimes animals do this when they are threatening. When chimpanzees show their teeth, it can also be a sign of fear. In the 1990s people started using the internet and emails as a regular way of communicating. So that they could show happiness or fun in an easy way, people started making little smiling faces using some of the symbols on the keyboard. Such a smiling face is normally called a smiley, smiley face, or happy face. Smileys show emotion when people are not able to see it in real life. The first smileys were made as yellow buttons, but now the most common smileys are made using computer keyboard symbols.

An architect is a person who designs buildings and prepares plans to give to a builder. What they design is called architecture. Architects make drawings with pens, pencils, and computers, and this is also called drafting. Sometimes architects first make small toy-sized buildings called models to show what the building will look like when it is done. Some of these models survive for hundreds of years, such as St Paul's Cathedral, London. Architects need to be good at maths and drawing. They need imagination. They must go to university and learn how to make a building's structure safe so that it will not collapse. They should also know how to make a building attractive, so that people will enjoy using it. An architect has a very important job, because his or her work will be seen and used by many people, probably for a very long time. If the design, materials and construction are good, the building should last for hundreds or even thousands of years. Usually building cost is what limits the life of a building, but fire, war, need or fashion can also affect things.

The Solar System is the Sun and all the objects that orbit around it. The Sun is orbited by planets, asteroids, comets and other things. The Sun is a star. It makes up 99.9% of the Solar System's mass. This means that it has strong gravity. The other objects are pulled into orbit around the Sun. There are eight planets in the Solar System. The first four planets are called terrestrial planets. They are mostly made of rock and metal, and they are mostly solid. The last four planets are called gas giants. This is because they are much larger than other planets and are mostly made of gas. The Solar System also contains other things, for example, asteroid belts, dwarf planets and thousands of very small objects there. Six of the planets and three of the dwarf planets are orbited by moons. There are about 200 moons in the Solar System. Many other systems like the Solar System have been found. A mountain is a large natural rise of the Earth's surface that usually has a "summit". Summit is the name for a mountain's top, which can also be called a peak. It is usually steeper and taller than a hill. By definition, mountains are often thought of as being a hill which is higher than 600 metres. However, some definitions say a mountain is a hill higher than 300 metres. The highest point of a mountain is called the peak. A mountain's summit is the highest area where an individual can reach. A mountain climber will not reach the peak of the mountain but can reach the summit. The height of a mountain is measured as distance above sea level. The highest known mountain in the Solar System is the Olympus Mons on Mars. It is 27 kilometres high. The highest mountain on Earth is Mount Everest in Asia. It is 8,848 metres high. The "tallness" of a mountain is measured from its base, even if under water. The "tallest" mountain in the world is Mauna Loa, in Hawaii.

Coffee is a plant and the name of the drink that is made from this plant. The coffee plant is a bush or tree that can grow up to 10 metres high, but is usually cut shorter. Coffee plants originally grew in Africa, and now also grow in South America, Central America and Southeast Asia. They are an important crop for the economies of many countries. To make a drink from coffee beans, the beans must first be specially prepared by drying the beans and then roasting. The beans are dried a short time after they are picked. This preserves them and makes them ready to be packed or roasted. Before the beans are made into a drink, they must be roasted or ground (crushed into tiny pieces in a coffee mill). When the ground coffee is placed into boiling water, the flavour and dark brown colour of the beans goes into the water. Coffee contains a number of useful nutrients. Coffee is usually served hot, and it is a popular drink in many countries.

Earth is the third planet of the solar system. It is the only planet known to have life on it. Because of its water, Earth is home to millions of species of plants and animals which require water to survive. About seven billion people live on Earth. They live in about 200 different lands called countries. Some, like Russia, are large with many large cities. Others, like the Vatican, are small. The five countries with the most people are China, India, the United States, Indonesia, and Brazil. About 90% of people live in the north half of the world, which has most of the land. People change the Earth in many ways. They have been able to grow plants for food and clothes for about ten thousand years. When there was enough food, they were able to build towns and cities. Near these places, men and women were able to change rivers, bring water to farms, and stop floods from coming over their land. People found useful animals and bred them so they were easier to keep.

A costume is a set of clothes that someone wears to look different from what they normally wear. Some costumes are special to countries or regions. Some people wear them because they are proud of their country. Actors in theatres wear costumes because they are pretending to be a person in a play or ballet. Costumes can also be worn for carnivals or parties. National or regional costume is worn to show that people come from a country or region. In the past, many groups of people wore national costumes every day. Today, most people do not wear costumes. Usually people dress up in national costume for special celebrations or for national dancing. Some well-known examples of national costume are the kilt which is worn by people in Scotland and the kimono worn in Japan. When actors perform in the theatre they usually wear a costume. These are the special clothes they wear to pretend they are a particular character in the story which they act out. They might be pretending to be any kind of person: a beggar, a king, a businessman, an ancient god, etc.

The Walt Disney World Resort, also called Disney World, is an entertainment complex near Orlando, Florida. It opened on the 1st of October 1971. There are 4 theme parks in Walt Disney World. Each of them has numerous rides, restaurants and entertainment activities. You can meet Disney characters there and have fun viewing different parades. The resort was inspired by the dreams of Walt Disney and his creation of Disneyland in California. Its original theme park, Magic Kingdom, is designed similarly to Disneyland. Disney World also has 2 water parks, 23 hotels, a campground, and a shopping area with souvenir shops, restaurants, and sports activities. Walt Disney created Disney World to have a vacation resort that was much different from Disneyland's one-day visit. Disney World covers an area of 50 square miles. The theme parks come with lots of different and fun rides and you can go swimming at the water parks. Sometimes, Disney characters walk around the parks to enjoy the younger ones. The rides are related to the books and films that Disney created.

Language is the normal way humans communicate. Only humans use language, though other animals communicate through other means. Language may be done by speech or by writing or by moving the hands to make signs. Humans also use language for thinking. The capacity to learn and use language is inherited. Normally, all humans are born with this capability. Which language is learned by a child depends on which language is spoken by the child's community. The capacity is inherited, but the particular language is learned. Children have a special period, from about 18 months to about four years, which is critical for learning the language. If this is seriously disrupted, then their language skills will be damaged. Older people learn differently, so they seldom learn a second language as well as they learn their native language. There are more than 7,000 languages in the world, but just 23 languages account for more than half the world's population. UNESCO says that 2,500 languages are at risk of becoming extinct.

A habitat is the area in which an organism lives. It is a summary term for all the resources — physical and living — which are present in an area. It is the natural environment in which an organism lives, and the physical environment which surrounds a population. Most animals live in one type of environment because they are best suited to it. We say they are 'adapted to this environment'. For example, animals such as frogs, newts, and ducks have webbed feet to help them swim in the water. There are many different types of habitats and many kinds of adaptations to each habitat. If the habitat changes, it may no longer be suitable for the animals and plants that live there. Climate change is making some habitats warmer, and so many animal species are moving to cooler areas. However, some species are not able to move and the populations are getting smaller. Scientists think that 10% of species may become extinct because of these changes.

A hotel or a guest-house is a large building with many rooms, where people can sleep when they are not at home. Hotels emerged as inns along important transport routes. The first hotels appeared in the days of the Ancient World, in the Middle Ages they also served as shelters for the infirm. In the 16th—17th centuries, the hotel was an aristocratic residential building with ceremonial and service courtyards. Today, according to the definition of the World Tourism Organisation, hotels are called a house with furnished rooms for short-term stay of visitors, consisting of a number of rooms that have a single guide and provide certain services. They are grouped into classes and categories according to the types of services provided, with the equipment available in them. The hotel is also called a residential property complex (building, part of the building, equipment and other property), designed to provide services. There are different types of hotels, for example, motels, inns, guest houses, etc. There are also hotels where conferences are held. Some hotels are called capsule hotels (in Japan).

A cloud is water vapour in the atmosphere that has condensed into very small water droplets or ice crystals that appear in visible shapes or formations above the ground. Water on the Earth turns into an invisible gas and rises up into the sky. Higher up where the air is colder, the water condenses: it changes from a gas to drops of water or crystals of ice. We see these drops of water as clouds. The drops fall back down to earth as rain, and then the water evaporates again. This is called the “water cycle”. The atmosphere always has some water vapour. Clouds are heavy. The water in a cloud can have a mass of several million tons. Every cubic metre of the cloud has only about 5 grams of water in it. Cloud droplets are also about 1000 times heavier than evaporated water, so they are much heavier than air. They do not fall, but stay in the air, because there is warm air all round the heavier water droplets. When water changes from gas to droplets, this makes heat. Because the droplets are very small, they “stick” to the warm air.

A leap year is a year in which an extra day is added to the Gregorian calendar, which is used by most of the world. A common year has 365 days, but a leap year has 366 days. The extra day, February 29, is added to the month of February. In a common year, February has 28 days, but in a leap year it has 29 days. The extra day, called a leap day, occurs on the same day of the week as the first day of the month, February 1. Leap years are evenly divisible by 4. The most recent leap year was 2020 and the next leap year will be 2024. However, any year that is evenly divided by 100 would not be a leap year unless it is evenly divided by 400. This is why 1600, 2000, and 2400 are leap years, while 1700, 1800, 1900, 2100, 2200, and 2300 are common years, even though they are all divisible by 4. Also, in a leap year, the months of January, April, and July all start on the same day of the week.

Venus is the second planet from the sun. It has a day longer than a year. The year length of Venus is 225 Earth days. The day length of Venus is 243 Earth days. Venus is a terrestrial planet because it has a solid, rocky surface like other planets in the inner solar system. Astronomers have known Venus for thousands of years. The ancient Romans named it after their goddess Venus, goddess of love and beauty. Venus is the brightest thing in the night sky except for the Moon. It is sometimes called “the morning star” or “the evening star” as sometimes it is easily seen just before the sun comes up in the morning. At other times, it can be seen just after the sun goes down in the evening. Venus comes closer to the Earth than any other planet does. Venus is sometimes called the sister planet of Earth as they are quite similar in size and gravity. In other ways the planets are very different. Venus' atmosphere is poisonous to life. For this it is sometimes known as the Earth's “evil twin”. Besides, Venus is much hotter than Earth.

Santa Claus, or Father Christmas, is a character from folk tales and legends. He is depicted as a big and cheerful white-bearded man wearing a red suit with white trim. In some countries, he is said to live at the North Pole with his wife Mrs Claus, elves who are said to build his toys, and reindeer who are said to pull his sleigh through the sky. Santa is said to bring gifts to small, good children worldwide on Christmas usually by sliding down fireplace chimneys and reindeer pulling his sleigh. However, after the children have fallen asleep, parents typically play the role of Santa Claus and leave their gifts under the Christmas tree. Santa Claus is not a real, historical person but the modern character of Santa was most likely created from different traditions from European and Christian culture. The Guinness World Record for the largest gathering of Santa Clauses is held in India, where 18,112 Santas got together in one place on the 27th of December 2014.

Guinness World Records is a reference book published each year. It has a collection of world records, both human achievements and the extremes of the natural world. The book itself holds a world record, as the best-selling copyrighted book series of all time. It is also one of the most often stolen books from public libraries in the United States. The first book was made in August, 1954. One thousand copies were printed and given away. The first edition was released on the 27th of August 1955. It went to the top of the British bestseller lists by Christmas. The following year it went to the United States, and it sold 70,000 copies. The book was very popular and the company decided to make one updated edition each year. They published in October to go with Christmas sales. Recent editions have focused on record feats by human competitors. Competitions go from obvious ones such as weightlifting to the longest egg tossing distance or the number of hot dogs that can be eaten in ten minutes.

Ferrets are domestic animals. They are the domestic form of the European polecat. They are sociable animals, and are usually kept in groups of two or more. They have a long and thin body and may have different colours and markings on their fur. A lot of ferrets in one place will sometimes have a strange smell. This is caused by natural oils produced by the ferrets. Ferrets are legal to have as a pet in most places. Ferrets are very flexible and can fit into small holes to flush out rabbits or rodents. Ferrets are good climbers, so if curtains are touching the floor they can easily climb the curtains. Ferrets should be kept in a group, unless you can provide them with multiple hours of activity, they get quite bored when alone. Ferrets tend to sleep curled up together in a ball, so that it becomes impossible to distinguish them from one another. Ferrets are carnivores and cannot tolerate grains or vegetables well. Their diet should consist of around 20% fat and 80% meat. Fresh chicken, turkey or even duck is a good choice for a ferret.

A skyscraper is a very tall building, usually more than 152 metres in height. Most skyscrapers are built in urban areas such as cities, and they are very common in the central business district areas of many large cities like New York City, London, Paris, Berlin, Moscow, and others. Skyscrapers are common in downtown districts where it's more economical to build up instead of out. Originally, the word "skyscraper" meant a tall sail on a sailing ship. Over time, the word's meaning has changed, and today it means a tall building. Until the 19th century, buildings taller than six storeys tall were not common. Tall buildings made of weak materials would fall down. Better technology helped make skyscrapers more common. The first building to be considered a skyscraper was built in Chicago, in the United States. The building, ten storeys high, was built from 1884 to 1885. It was destroyed in 1931 because they wanted to build another building in its previous place.

Writing is the act of recording language on a visual medium using a set of symbols. The symbols must be known to others, so that the text may be read. Usually, all educated people in a country use the same writing system to record the same language. Writing differs from speech because the readers need not be present at the time. We can read writing from long ago, and from different parts of the world. Text stores and communicates knowledge. Writing is one of the greatest inventions of the human species. It was invented after people settled in towns, and after agriculture started. Writing dates from about 3,300 BC, which is over 5000 years ago, in the Middle East. Writing today is usually on paper, though there are ways to print on almost any surface. Writing is traditionally done using a hand tool such as a pencil, a pen, or a brush. More and more, however, text is created by input on a computer keyboard.

Money, also sometimes called currency, can be defined as anything that people use to buy goods and services. Money is what many people receive for selling their own things or services. There are lots of different kinds of money in the world. Most countries have their own kind of money, such as the United States dollar or the British pound. Today, money does not mean only things you can hold. It is numbers in bank accounts, saved in computer memories. A long time ago, people did not buy or sell with money. Instead, they traded one thing for another to get what they wanted or needed. When people changed from trading in things like cows and wheat to using money instead, they needed things that would last a long time. They must still have a known value and could be carried around. The first money in the world, metal coins, appeared during the 7th century BC in the country called Lydia, in the western part of what is now Turkey. This idea soon spread to Greece, the rest of the Mediterranean, and the rest of the world.

Pluto is a dwarf planet in the Solar System. It is the ninth largest body that moves around the Sun. The name 'Pluto' was proposed by an 11-year-old schoolgirl in Oxford. She was interested in classical mythology and astronomy. The name was of the Roman god of the underworld. The girl thought it was a good name for a dark and cold world. She suggested it when she was talking with her grandfather who was a former librarian at the University of Oxford's Bodleian Library. He passed the name to Professor Herbert Hall Turner. Turner told this proposed name to the astronomers in the United States. The object was officially named on March 24, 1930. At first, Pluto was called a planet. On August 24, 2006, the International Astronomical Union gave a definition to the word "planet" for the first time. By this definition, Pluto was not a planet anymore. Pluto is mainly made of rock and ice. It is quite small. It is about a fifth of the weight of the Earth's Moon. Pluto is very far from the Sun, so its temperature is very low.

Science is what we do to find out about the natural world. Natural sciences include chemistry, biology, geology, astronomy, and physics. Science uses mathematics and logic, which are sometimes called 'formal sciences'. Natural science makes observations and experiments. Science produces accurate facts, scientific laws and theories. 'Science' also refers to the large amount of knowledge that has been found using this process. Research uses the scientific method. People who study and research science and try to find out everything about it are called scientists. Scientists must be very careful to make explanations that fit well with what they observe and measure. They compete to provide better explanations. An explanation might be interesting or pleasing, but if it does not agree with what other scientists really see and measure, they will try to find a better explanation. Before a scientific article is published, other scientists read the article. They decide whether the explanations make sense from the data. After articles are published, other scientists will also check to see if the same experiments, observations or tests produce the same data again.

A satellite is an object that orbits another object. In space, satellites may be natural, or artificial. The moon is a natural satellite that orbits the Earth. Most artificial satellites also orbit the Earth, but some orbit other planets, or the Sun or Moon. Satellites are used for many purposes. The world's first artificial satellite, the Sputnik 1, was launched by the Soviet Union on October 4, 1957. This surprised the world, and the United States quickly worked to launch their own satellite, starting the space race. The United States launched their first satellite, called Explorer 1 on January 31, 1958. The UK launched its first satellite in 1962. Since then, thousands of satellites have been launched into orbit around the Earth. Some satellites, notably space stations, have been launched in parts and assembled in orbit. Artificial satellites come from more than 50 countries and have used the satellite launching capabilities of ten nations. A few hundred satellites are currently working, but thousands of unused satellites and satellite fragments orbit the Earth as space debris.

Music is a form of art that uses sound organised in time. Music is also a form of entertainment that puts sounds together in a way that people like, find interesting or dance to. Most music includes people singing with their voices or playing musical instruments, such as the piano, guitar, drums or violin. Someone who makes music is known as a musician. Music is sound that has been organised by using rhythm, melody or harmony. If someone bangs saucepans while cooking, it makes noise. If a person bangs saucepans or pots in a rhythmic way, they are making a simple type of music. Even in the stone age people made music. The first music was probably made trying to imitate sounds and rhythms that occurred naturally. Shamans sometimes imitate sounds that are heard in nature. It may also serve as entertainment, or have practical uses, like attracting animals when hunting. Some animals also can use music. Songbirds use song to protect their territory, or to attract a mate. Monkeys have been seen beating hollow logs. This may, of course, also serve to defend the territory.

Graffiti is marks, scratchings or drawings made on a surface in a public place. It is often created with paint or spray paint. A single mark could be called a graffito but the word graffiti is usually used, meaning that there is more than one mark. Graffiti can take the form of art, drawings, or words. When done without a property owner's permission it is considered vandalism. Today, many graffiti are very complicated mixtures of writing and pictures. They are sometimes made by gangs and applied with spray paint to buildings, bridges, street signs, and other areas. Graffiti is often but not always illegal. Some cities have small areas where graffiti can be made. Sometimes graffiti is very beautiful and is considered not only something bad, but something good, like art. Some people even pay graffiti artists to do graffiti on their buildings.

Thanksgiving is a holiday in the United States and Canada when people give thanks. In the United States, it is on the fourth Thursday of November. In Canada, it is on the second Monday of October. Thanksgiving was first celebrated to give thanks for the harvest. The event that Americans commonly call the 'First Thanksgiving' was celebrated by the Pilgrims after their first feast in the New World in October 1621. This feast lasted three days. More people in the United States celebrate Thanksgiving than Christmas and New Year. The Thanksgiving holiday is a four-day holiday over a weekend, starting on Thanksgiving Thursday and ending on Sunday. Families and friends usually eat a special meal together, usually with a turkey as the main dish. This meal also usually includes mashed potatoes, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie, several casseroles, and stuffing.

Monopoly is a board game played by two to eight players. In the game, players move around the spaces of the board, buying and selling land and buildings to try to become the richest player. When all the other players run out of money, you win the game. People play monopoly for different reasons. Some may play for family game night, others use it as a learning tool at school, and others play it just to have fun. Monopoly may be used as a teaching tool to teach children a variety of lessons while having fun. It teaches how to make deals when trading, playing fair (because cheaters never win), knowing the value of money, good sportsmanship, the thrill of competition, strategies and organisation. At an elementary level, it offers a marvellous vehicle for teaching mathematics. Through the game, children explore different areas of mathematics – not only adding and subtracting but also probability, percentages, and patterns. At a higher level, teachers can use Monopoly to teach microeconomics principles.

A translator reads something written in one language and speaks it or writes it in another language. For example, they could read a book in French and then translate it into English. See translation for more information. In order to convert meanings from one language into another one, translators must be able to know the target language deeply. They are conveying the original meaning of the source text or material to the second language. As a result, translators do not only convert words, which makes it more like an art than a science. An interpreter is a person who receives a non-recorded message spoken in one language, the source language, and repeats the same message in a different language, the target language. Unlike a translator, an interpreter cannot simply rewind a recording and hear the same speech again. This makes an interpreter's job difficult. They must remember many parts of speech.

A game is something that people often do for fun. There are different kinds of games using many kinds of equipment. For example, in video games, people often use controllers or their keyboard to control what happens on a screen, such as television screens and computer ones too. In card games, players use playing cards. There are also games that use your body, such as 'Twister'. Most games need equipment, but not always. Children's street games often need no equipment. In board games, players may move pieces on a flat surface called a board. Some games have complicated rules, some have simple rules. Games appear in all cultures all over the world, an ancient custom that brings people together for social opportunities. Games allow people to go beyond the limit of the immediate physical experience, to use their imagination. Common features of games include a finish that you cannot forecast, agreed upon rules, competition, separate place and time, imaginary elements, elements of chance, established goals and personal enjoyment.

Denmark, officially named the Kingdom of Denmark, is a Nordic country in Northern Europe. It is the furthest south of the Scandinavian countries, to the south of Norway and south-west of Sweden (which it is connected to by a bridge). It has a southern border with Germany. It borders both the North Sea to the west and the Baltic Sea to the east. Denmark is a developed country with a large welfare state. In 2006 and 2007, surveys ranked Denmark as 'the happiest place in the world', based on standards of health, welfare, and education. The weather in Denmark is quite windy and rainy. In the winter, it does not get very cold. In most years, there are only a few weeks of snow. Every ten years or so, the sea around the islands freezes over, but in most winters it does not. Most summers in Denmark are not very hot.

Sir Charles Spencer "Charlie" Chaplin was a British actor, comedian, movie maker, screenwriter, editor, musician, and author. He was very famous in silent movies (where there was no talking or sound). He acted, directed, scripted, and produced most of them. Charlie Chaplin was a performer for almost 70 years. He started working when he was 5, and worked until he was 80. The character that Charlie Chaplin played most was called "the Little Tramp". The "Tramp" was a man of good manners, who wore a coat, a pair of big trousers, shoes, moustache, and a black hat. Chaplin won two special Oscars. Chaplin had first been chosen for both "Best Actor" and "Best Comedy Directing". But then, instead, he was given a special award "for versatility and genius in acting, writing, directing and producing". He also became the first actor to have appeared in the cover of "Time" magazine in 1925. On the 9th of March 1975, Charlie Chaplin was knighted in England by Queen Elizabeth II.

The Great Wall of China is an ancient wall in China. The wall is made of cement, rocks, bricks, and dirt. It was finished in 1878 and it was meant to protect the north of the empire of China from enemy attacks. It is the longest structure humans have ever built. It is about 21,196 kilometres long, 9.1 metres wide and 15 metres high. The earlier sections on the wall are made of compacted dirt and stone. Later in the Ming Dynasty they used bricks. There are 7,000 watch towers, block houses for soldiers and beacons to send smoke signals. Nineteen walls have been built that were called the Great Wall of China. The first was built in the 7th century BC. The Great Wall was designated a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1987. It was declared as one of the Seven Wonders of the World in 2007.

The capybara is a semi-aquatic rodent native South America. It weighs about a hundred pounds, and is about two feet tall at the shoulder. The capybara is the world's largest rodent. Capybaras live in grassy wetlands or close to rivers in many parts of South America. In the morning, evening, and at night they eat grass, mostly on land. They spend the hottest hours of the day in the water. They are good swimmers and divers. Webs between their toes help them swim. They can only hold their breath underwater for about five minutes at a time. Sometimes they hide in water for much longer, with only their noses sticking out to breathe. Capybaras are not endangered. Their population is stable, not increasing or decreasing very much. They can live in towns or zoos. Capybaras are sometimes kept as pets. They are especially liked in Japan, and are kept as pets there too.

A desert is any region that can have a moisture deficit over the course of a year. It does rain in the desert, but not often. One place in the Atacama Desert had no rain for 401 years. In other deserts it may rain every year or once every few years. Hot deserts are mostly in the subtropics. They can be covered by sand, rock, salt lakes, stony hills and even mountains. Most non-polar deserts are hot in the day and chilly at night. The largest hot desert in the world is the Sahara in North Africa. It is almost as large as Europe or the United States. Cold deserts can be found close to the poles. That is why they are also called polar deserts. Other regions of the world have cold deserts too, for instance, high altitude areas like the Himalayas. These are called montane deserts. Antarctica is the world's largest cold desert. The second largest one is the Arctic desert, but that has started to warm up now.

Castles are medieval buildings which were defensive homes for powerful people. They could be made from wood, stone, or brick, and some were used for hundreds of years. Thousands of castles were built across Europe, the Middle East, and Japan with different designs. Today, most castles are ruins and many are popular tourist attractions. Castles were first built in the 9th century and the practice continued up to the 16th century. A castle was both a home for someone important like a king or noble, and a fort. Castles were designed to keep people out and show how powerful the people inside were. Castles were usually built from either wood or stone, and sometimes brick. Some castles started off as wooden and were then rebuilt in stone, which was more expensive and stronger, so that the castles could be bigger. They could be built on hills or low areas like the edge of towns or at river crossings.
